ON ELOQUENCE.

BY LEWIS DAVIS.

Some people think eloquence consists alone in the speaker; his rare gifts of genius; his volubility; his ready wit and fancy; his tumid, voluble utterance; in the studied contrivances of speech; or the agonizing properties of the lecture-room.

Many whose office requires public speaking, as soon as they commence discourse are particular to affect a majestic dignity and importance, as if without this spell, the auditor might not realize the presence of a wise and pompous personage.

Since proficiency in rhetorical attainments is so rarely to be found, erroneous oratory we can account for or endure—for only a few are expected to have the mastery and know the regulation and control of the voice by means of the action of articulation rightly applied.

The triumphs of true eloquence, touching and sublime; awful as they have sometimes been, are commonly when the orator, forgetful of himself and every thing else, stands before you in the simple majesty of truth, overpowered with his own convictions of right, exhibiting the skill and might of logic, with his own soul abounding in knowledge and love, and his countenance glowing with holy zeal, speaking in thrilling, melting tones, with a voice full, round, rich and melodious, which makes an overflood of sound, while golden sentiments descend in airy, freshening streams, reviving every aspiring heart.

others. Hence, when such ought to be absorbed in the lofty subject while presented in the most effective manner, nevertheless are all the while in hearty sympathy with low, base, prejudiced minds, and disorderly persons in the audience, who come not desirous to learn or be edified, but to gase and disturb the thoughtful and studious.

The thundering oratory of Demosthenes, or the touching strains of Ciceroian eloquence, would have a little effect upon such judgmentless minds as upon the tumultuous waves of the sea, or the South-Sea Islanders; for such take pride on the occasion in showing the power of their own superior rousing abilities to turn the current of the most forcible eloquence from a thousand attentive minds, that otherwise would be overpowered with the momentous subject in profound and solemn audience.

No one can be affected by eloquence who has not some susceptible element of being on which it can sympathetically strike. Could any (living) man rouse deep feeling in the bosom of granite, or electricity and penetrate stony with emotion? Could Demosthenes be impressive before a company of hardened ruffians, with little sense of moral beauty, and with no sense of the power and majesty of eternal truth? Could Cicero charm those barren shapes so overwrought with idealities that they cannot endure the realities of life, at the same time incapable of perceiving true moral beauty?

With all the triumphs of irresistible eloquence, it would be difficult to convince those myriads that the sad insufficiency of the oratory is not from power to communicate, but from want of capacity in themselves to comprehend what is touching and grand, owing to moral obtuseness and a wrong frame of mind and heart.

Remember, ye who ridicule a young man for his person, and stigmatize him as "small," that by-and-by he can afford to be generous when you have nothing to give.

PETER CHAMBERY, Esq., AND HIS FIVE DOLLARS.

SHOWING THE REASON WHY HE WOULD NOT PAY THEM.

"Sir, if you please, boss would like you to pay this little bill to-day," said the tenth time a half grown boy in a dirty jacket, to a lawyer in his office.

"You're an impudent boy," "I've got your eye teeth out, I see."

"I had, rather be sued, if he will employ me," "But who is to pay them costs—the boss?"

"Well, I'm glad of it," answered Mr. Last, surveying the money through his glasses, "and it's a half eagle too."

"Remember, ye who ridicule a young man for his person, and stigmatize him as 'small,' that by-and-by he can afford to be generous when you have nothing to give."

come to-morrow. I can't help you unless I sell my coat of my back, or pawn my schooler's kegs. Nobody says me."

"Here sir, is five dollars Mr. Furnace owes you. He says when he told you he couldn't pay your bill to-day, he didn't expect some money that came in after you left the shop."

"I'm very sorry, Mrs. Conway," said the storekeeper, looking into his money-drawer; "I've no more shillings here, and your bill is five dollars and ten pence."

"The lawyer looked all at once very serious, and gave one of those long whistles peculiar to him."

"I'm glad of it," answered Mr. Last, surveying the money through his glasses, "and it's a half eagle too."

In obedience to the law requiring an annual report from the different town superintendents, would respectfully offer the following as that of Deerfield township, Cumberland county. The township is divided into six districts, and also contributes to the formation of two districts of adjacent townships.

The law in relation to licensing teachers have not been obeyed as they universally should be, but through the past summer I have compelled all to be licensed according to law.

"I have seen you as true an account as I have been able to collect from the different sources in this township, at the same time I acknowledge it to be very deficient in many points."

"First—The teachers of this township do not seem to understand that it is their duty to make out a list and send me, as the law requires them, but they leave that for me to find out as best I can, by collecting the roll books from the schools. Thus I am able only to furnish a part of my report through the teacher—the very source to look to."

"In reviewing the past three years, I think it is very evident that there is an increased interest felt throughout the township in regard to our common schools, though the inhabitants are not yet awake to their own interest upon the subject."

A Stirring and Awakening Call. Tell me, O ye Professors of religion, in the hour of God's judgment come to you? is it begun at your house yet? How do you feel it? hath it broken your hearts? hath it contrited your spirits? Have you known the godly sorrow? the chastisement of the Lord, and rebukes of the Almighty? Hath his pure eternal Word directed you, between your souls and spirits, the joints and marrow? Have you ever been weary and heavy laden with sin? hath it been a burden to you? Did you ever cry out in the agony of your spirits, "Men and brethren, what shall we do to be saved?" Who shall deliver us from the body of sin here and the wrath to come? the travail of the holy anointed. If not you are yet strangers to Christ and his kingdom; and if you die in that state, where he is gone, you shall never come. For Zion, God's city, must be redeemed through righteousness; yea, the house of God cannot escape it; therefore said one of old, "If judgment begun at the house of God, where shall the ungodly and sinner appear?" Woe to them that live without the judgments of the Lord! woe to them that cast his reproofs behind their backs, and live in earthly pleasures, fattening themselves in lusts and pleasures, as for the day of slaughter, and treasuring up wrath against the day of wrath! The ancient saints lived not thus; they worked out their salvation with fear and trembling; yea, they gave all diligence to make their calling and election sure. Which way do you work out yours? Halleluk, that holy prophet, his lips quivered, and his body trembled; that his soul might rest in the day of trouble; is this your state? or are you rather worshipping the beast at this day, lovers of the world, that much carnal zeal were maintained to preserve the church clean and pure by a wholesome discipline.

How DISCIPLINE WAS PRESERVED and offenders were dealt with in the olden time, Cave, in his "Primitive Christianity," clearly shows, from the writings of many of the ancients, particularly for the first three hundred years after Christ, that much care and zeal were maintained to preserve the church clean and pure by a wholesome discipline. Penitents, before they were received into unity, made open confession of their faults; this being accounted the very spring of repentance, and without which they could not be received into the church. "Born of confession," says Tertullian, "is born repentance, and on repentance God is satisfied." And the ancients, for their riches nor honor would procure any admission into the church; a remarkable instance whereof was in the Emperor Theodosius the Great, who, for his bloody and barbarous slaughter of the Theodosians, was brought to public confession, and forced to undergo a severe course of penance for eight months together; at length, after he had passed through abundance of sorrow, with tears and lamentation for his sin, he was admitted into fellowship again. "Be wisely," says Cave, "did the prudence and pity of those times deal with offenders, neither letting the reins so loose as to patronize presumption or encourage any to sin; nor yet holding them so strict, as to drive men into despair."—John Griffith.

BEAUTIFUL ANALOGY.—There is a very instructive and beautiful analogy to be observed in the two forces (the centrifugal and centrifugal) whereby the planets are balanced and kept in their appointed orbits, and the two great agencies of human conduct, viz: the rushing onward will, and the centralizing, attracting power of the Holy Spirit of Truth, "a manifestation of which," we are told in Scripture, "is given to every man to profit withal." But few persons, it will be said, are sensible of this restraining power. Granted; yet that is no reason why they should not be so. They do not perceive its influence because there is a want of humble passivity in yielding to it. The will has become so imperious by long indulgence, and has so often and so violently torn itself away from its proper center, that it runs on unchecked in its forward zigzag course; sometimes exploding and wounding itself, and sometimes wounding others. Could the planets have also found a will of their own, they would probably long since have passed the universe.—Mary Ann Kelly.

HOMETRADE.—"The principal spiritual trade of a Christian is his hometrade, such as meditation, self-examination, application and praise; this is more than enough to employ all his time without looking at other's faults."

SICKNESS.—Sickness is intended to teach us what a vain thing the love of the world is—what a poor thing man is—and what a precious thing an interest in Christ is.

FORGIVENESS.—Two persons being very much at variance, referred their quarrel to a third person. Each accused the other, and both declared himself to be without blame. The umpire heard them very patiently, and then said, "My judgment is this: Let the innocent forgive the guilty."

INTERCOURSE WITH GOD.—Be assured there is no state in which preservation from evil and unprofitable thoughts is more likely to be experienced, than in a diligent intercourse with the God of our

The Annual Exhibition of the Union Academy, at Shiloh, will be held on Wednesday evening, the 20th inst.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers in Bridgeton and vicinity to the advertisement of Mr. J. R. Graham, in another column. Persons wanting good carpets, can do as well with him as they can elsewhere.

Atlantic Monthly.

The March number of this valuable magazine has been received. It opens with a very interesting and instructive article on German Universities, followed by that intensely attractive and universally admired story by Professor Holmes. There are many other contributions to this number worthy of an extended notice by the receiver, and of an attentive perusal by the many readers of the Magazine. Much valuable information can be gained from the article on "Harbors of the Great Lakes." "The Men of Selwyn" and "Diamonds and Pearls," are such as we always wish to read. But we cannot lose this notice without calling our readers' attention to the fine piece of poetry, "Behind the Mask."

AN OLD TREE.

A tree known as the Monarch Tree of California, standing in the Sierra Nevada Mountains was blown down recently. It was known as the "Miner's Cabin," and was thirty feet in diameter, and supposed to be three thousand years old. Were it not for the reliable accounts furnished by the official surveys ordered by the government, we should be very much inclined to doubt the account of the size of some of the California trees. It is hard to realize the immensity of a tree thirty feet in diameter, equal to 94 feet in circumference. A log sawed off of it and stood up on the larger end would cover more than seven hundred square feet of ground. One cut off of the butt four feet long, if solid, would contain more than two thousand eight hundred cubic feet, making more than twenty cords of wood. Allowing this tree to be of the same size for twenty-eight feet to the branches, and to be solid throughout, it would make one hundred and fifty-four cords of wood. Computing the rest of the tree to make as much more wood, and the tree would yield the enormous amount of three hundred cords of wood, equal to about ten vessel loads. The surveys speak of the trunk of one of this kind which had been blown down, and was hollow, through which a man could ride on horseback.

Such enormous trees are usually hollow.

A New Agricultural Article.

In one of the counties of Ohio, pepper-mint has been extensively grown as an article of commerce. More than four thousand dollars has been paid to the producers for it. Oil is extracted from the plant which is extensively used in the manufacture of various confectionery, medicinal and toilet articles, to say nothing of the value of the plant itself for mint juleps, &c. As the country increases in wealth the consumption of the oil will also largely increase. The oil in Ohio at the place of manufacture is worth twelve dollars and a half a gallon.

We regret exceedingly that we are unable to furnish any data by which the cost, yield or profit per acre can be estimated. Our enterprising agricultural friends can ascertain for themselves however, in one or two ways. First, if any of them should have friends or acquaintances in Lake County, Ohio, where it is cultivated, by making a simple inquiry of them. Or, secondly, by procuring seed or plants, and planting a small spot of ground and distilling the produce themselves. Of all modes of ascertaining results this is undoubtedly the best and most satisfactory, though not always the cheapest. As in the production of other agricultural articles, New Jersey is favorably situated for its profitable cultivation. Not that it is at all likely that this article would form an article of general production throughout the state, but then, many farms have "waste spots" of no particular use for any of our staple productions. As it belongs to the same genus with the pear-mint which grows luxuriantly in low grounds, it could in all probability be profitably planted in the low spots, and be made to take the place of that plant. It will also help to make variety in our productions, and if it adds only a few thousand dollars more to our agricultural products, it will help to that extent to fill the pockets of the agriculturists.

The Policy of the Administrations.

The Withdrawal of Troops from Fort Sumter.

Washington, March 11.—An official letter from Major Anderson, received on Saturday, says that he had only fifteen days subsistence and wood on hand. The question has, therefore, risen with the Administration whether reinforcements shall be attempted or the fort abandoned? The latter course, it is thought, will be adopted, from inevitable necessity by the advice of the General Staff. There is however, a conflict of opinion among the Republicans as to the course to be pursued.

THE EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Washington, March 11.—The Senate, in Executive session, today confirmed the appointment of Benjamin C. Davis, of Ohio, as District Attorney for the Southern District of Ohio. The House of Representatives today passed the bill for the evacuation of Fort Sumter, which was passed by the Senate on Monday last. The bill provides for the evacuation of the fort by the 15th inst.

THE STATE OF THE NATION.

When a nation is in the midst of unbounded prosperity; when it appears that all the mighty avenues of wealth are opened to its enterprise; when the greatest civil and religious liberty are enjoyed by its citizens; when the whole civilized world is forced to admire its greatness, it might reasonably be expected that before all these blessings would be ruthlessly cast aside, one moment of calm reflection would be taken by the people, that before the peaceful and happy land they now possess should be changed into the wild and cruel scenes of a fraternal war, reason—calm, unbiased reason would be permitted to reign for one moment, at least. But we to-day witness the astonishing spectacle of a people, enjoying all the blessings of peace, of liberty, and of representation, with no reason, but the most wild and deceitful anticipations; with a vague apprehension of what might be, but with no substantial or even reasonable grounds to base their fears upon, raising the impious hand to destroy the Union of these States, and ultimately if not immediately drag the sections into a most dreadful civil war. The whole tenor of the Southern madness, for we may characterize it by no other term, means war. They, under the pretext of right, seize of property of the nation; they strip the military stores belonging to the government, the Mints, the Custom House, the forts, the arsenals, the dock yards, the government vessels, the guns, the ammunition, and, before all nations, sacred homes of the sick, the wounded and the dying. The glorious ensign of the Republic, the stars and stripes has been insulted in ten thousand different ways and places. Our fellow citizens have been tarred and feathered, their blood has been shed, and their bodies hung on the trees, a prey to the vultures, to swell the monument of crimes and revolting acts which are crying to heaven for vengeance. And why have all these things been done? Can honest-minded men say there has been a deont pretext? We think not. If any one should instance the John Brown raid, we should be very much inclined to doubt the account of the size of some of the California trees. It is hard to realize the immensity of a tree thirty feet in diameter, equal to 94 feet in circumference. A log sawed off of it and stood up on the larger end would cover more than seven hundred square feet of ground. One cut off of the butt four feet long, if solid, would contain more than two thousand eight hundred cubic feet, making more than twenty cords of wood. A GRACE OF THE HOLY COMMUNION... Mr. Editor:—We have a small paper for you for the presentation of both sides. We received through the Post-Office from Mr. Acog, the following, clipped from some newspaper:

THE RIGHTS AND WRONGS OF WOMAN... Last evening, Miss Anna E. Dickinson, a young Quakeress, who is "tall and young and fair, and speaks Romanly," delivered a lecture in Concert Hall, on Woman's Rights. Her fame has hitherto been mostly confined to Chester County; but inasmuch as moderate eloquence will make a woman celebrated, she bids fair to become widely known.
