THE WHITE CANOE. In the days of old, long before the deen solitudes of the West were disturbed by wh to men, it was the oustom of the Indian warriors of the forest to assemble at the great cataract, and offer a human sacrifice to the Spirit of the Falls The offering consisted of a white cance full of ripe fruits and blooming flowers, which was paddled of the man. To picture the countenance over the terrible cliff by the fairest girl of the tribe, who had just arrived at the age of womanhood. It was counted an honor by the tribe to whose lot it fell to make the costly sacrifice; and even the doomed maiden deemed it a high complement to be selected to guide the white cance over the falls. The only daughter of a chief of the Seneca Indians was once chosen as a sacrificial offering to the Spirit of Niagara. Her mother had been slain by a hostile tribe.-Her father was the bravest among his warriors, and when the lot fell on his fair child. no symptom of feeling crossed his countenance.

At length the day arrived; it faded into night as the savage festivities and rejoicing proceeded; then the moon arose and silvered the cloud of mist that rose above the turmoil of Niagara; and now the white canoe, laden with its precious freight, glided from the bank and swept out into the dread rapid from which escape was hopeless. The young girl calmly steered her tiny bark towards the centre of the stream, while frantic yells and shouts arose from the shores. Suddenly another white cance shot forth upon the stream, and, under the powerful impule of the Seneca chief, flew like an arrow to destruction. It overtook the first : the eyes of father and child met in one last phatically effeminate. In youth it might gaze of love, and then they plunged together over the thundering cataract!

o this port to day brings us the gratifying intelligence of the complete reinforcement of Fort Pickens. The safety of that important post is now beyond question, and the flying rumors of the past fortnight, as we have already intimated, are wholly without foundation. The Atlantic sailed from this port under scaled orders, on Sunday morning, April 7. She took on board three hundred and fifty eight soldiers from Fort Lafayette on Saturday afternoon. This entire force, together with immense supplies of military stores, ammunition, provisions, and two batteries of artillery, have been safely landed at Fort Pickens. Captain A. G. Gray was in command of the Atlantic during the trip. The secessionists have, it appears, given up all idea of attacking Fort Pickens at present—and, probably, forever. The editor of a Memphis secession paper, who has just reached home from Pensacola, says it will not be attacked, unless provocation should be given by aggressive movements on the part of the garrison. They find it is of no use to attempt it.

The 7th Regiment in Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 25, 1861. The 7th Regiment has arrived amid the wildest enthusiasm. This morning a train men, to be immediately detached from the brought them on, reaching this city at noon, of cars went to Annapolis junction and or shortly after. As they arrived at the station, the Massachusetts Regiment were outside the Capitol, and a mighty cheer went up from the mass, which was distinctly heard far off in the town. At once the city, before so dull, was alive and running toward the station. One would have tho't the invasion was of a foe, and that a panic

At 1 o'clock the Regiment was on the avenue, marching in splendid style toward the White House. They looked worn and weary, as well they might, after their rough work. Nevertheless, they were all in good spirits, and they walked almost with springing steps. As they passed along, they were received with frequent cheers, and the ladies continually waved their handkerchiefs, while smiles were on every face. No body of men could ever meet a more enthusiastic or hearty greeting than they, to whom every bosom seemed to warm. When in the place of drums and fifes, the full band struck up, the whole city danced with delight. A greater change never passed over a town, than that wrought in the space of half an hour, by the coming of the long looked for Seventh. The Regiment marched to the White House, paid a salute to the President, before whom they passed in review, then went directly to their quarters at Willard's, Brown's and the National Hotels. At the former place, they at once gathered about the fountain in the inclosed yard for purposes of ablution. While thus engaged they were addressed by Cassius M. Clay and Gen. Lane, to whose remarks they responded with their own peculiar cheer, most ringingly bestowed. Then came dinner, which was partaken of with a relish known only by the hungry.-After dinner they spread about the town. each man a lion, and gathering the smiles of beauty at every step. TRENTON, April 80th .- Both branches of the Legislature met in extra session at noon to day to provide for the necessities of the times. Gov. Olden's Message was promptly delivered. It reviews the Southern rebellion, their attack nals, their plan to attack Washington, and the Baltimore troubles, and says there is now no division in New Jersey as to the preservation of the Union. The expression of opinion throughout the North demanding a route to the National Capital has been very emphatic, and Baltimore will evidently draw on itself destruction by resistance. A meeting of New York merchants recently claimed on behalf of the people the freedom of the route at all hazards, and George Law expresses the pre-

NEWYORK, April 25, 1861.
To the President of the United States— Sir: The people of the Free States have now been for some time ent off from communication with the capital of their country by a mob in the city of Baltimore. The troops of the General Government have been attacked and shot down by the mob, in their passage through that city in pursuance to the orders of the Government. highest point that this state of things has been so long tolerated; and the people are determined that free and uninterrupted communication with the seat of Government shall be immediately established, not by circuitour routes, but by the direct lines of ommunication that they have heretofore traveled over. And it is demanded of Govrnment that they at once take measures to open and establish those lines of communicaion, and that they protect and preserve them from any further interruption. Unless this s done, the people will be compelled to take it into their own hands, let the consequences be what they may, and let them fall where they will. It is certainly most desirable that this be done through the regularly constituted authorities at Washington; and the Government is earnestly desired to act with-

THE subscribers would direct the attention of farmers and others to their increased facilities for manufacturing superior WOOLEN GOODS, such as Satinetts. Cloths, Blankets, Horse Blankets, Flanguels, Stocking and Carpet Yarn. We manufacture a derable article, of the best quality, and at low prices. Mechanics and laboring men generally would find it to their advantage to purchase of us, instead of wearing foreign goods which will do them to adequate service.

We will pay the highest market prices for WOOL, which can be sent to our Fartory at Bridgeton, or Allowaystown, and there manufacture it o order, or cash pald. Also, all wool left with D-miel Sheppard, agent at Greenwich, will be promptly attended to.

We do not you up this staple on speculation, and therefore, whilst laying at the highest rates, we insist that a preference should be freely extended to home manufacturers, and claim that, since no loss is incurred, we should have a priority tamong wool growers, or those who have wool to sell.
