AN AMUSING LOVE STORY.

ELI GODDARD'S FORFEIT!

The youthful portion of the town of Liberty Centre was in a high state of excitement one sunny day of February, for Kitty Baldwin had announced to them on lemon-colored paper, with a bunch of hyacinths in the left hand upper corner, that the pleasure of their company was requested on the following Thursday been given in Liberty Centre, for the reason that Judge Dyke's daughter had given the last one, and it had been done in such a style of magnificence that no one could hope to surpass it, so they would give none at all. But Kitty Baldwin had been spending two weeks at her cousin's in Boston, and while there had attended several parties and obtained some new ideas of which she was sure Amanda Dyke had never dreamed of, so she determined on her return to have a party several notches above the Dykes. She suggested this to her father, and he readily acquiesced, for he had just made a speech in the Legislature on the "Barlist of those she wanted to invite. First she put down only those who were class ed as the "upper ten" of Liberty Contre : but on second thoughts, she found that it she wished to amaze any one with the splendor of her entertainment, she had better include in her invitations ev ory one that she knew. On counting them up, she found that they numbered would be crowded; but she concluded and were resumed in the morning. that some would be sick, or have noth-busiest scene was at Equire Baldwin's .-Carpets were covered over with sheeting; new red damask curtains were purchased to replace the old ones; astral and solar lamps were brought from secluded closets; spoons, blanc-mange moulds and candelabra were borrowed from the neighbors: superfluous furniture was carried up stairs, and the whole house completely swept and garnished.

Days and nights rolled on, and the long wished for evening arrived. Squire Baldwin lighted up the red and blue the chosen game. They each had a —sponge cake, stewed oysters, nuts, apcandles on the mantle piece; the solars number. Eli's number was nine, and ples and oranges were placed in admiraand astrals began to shed their radiance; ly on a chair awaiting the arrivals.-Pretty soon the bell rang, and the door being opened, a confused mass of hoods and cloaks hurried up stairs. The bell rang again and again; sometimes a dozen would meet on the door step, and come in. This was Eli Goddard, and a word or two about him will not be amiss. He was a son of Parous nature, but was the most awkward fellow imaginable He was always stum bling and blundering, and his hands were like the hands on the clock of the Fitchburg Railroad depot in Boston, never in the right place. The girls all laughed at him, and none of them more than Carrie Brooks - a wild, brilliant, fun loving girl, who had a keen sense of the ludicrous which sometimes overcame the better feelings of her heart. Eli Goddard admired Carrie, and tried to manifest it; but he did not know his funny attempts. Carrie had many other suitors, and although they were icalous of each other, none of them were jealous of Eli. They thought so lively a girl as Carrie would not regard such an unsophisticated youth, so long as they were about with their stylish cothes, massive finger rings and scarf pins. But in reality, Carrie cared nothing for outward show, and in thinking over the character and habits of the young men of her acquaintance, she had often decided in her own mind that Eli Goddard was the most sensible, upright and virtuous of all. He was never seen in idle or dissolute company; never played billiards in the tavern; was always posted on all subjects of history and philosophy, and stood at the head of the academy as a scholar. She lamented his gawky ways, and sometimes wondered if something could not be done to remedy them, and she would determine not to laugh at him. again ; but the next time she witnessed would burst forth.

As we were saying. Eli appeared. He kissed every girl in the room.

What would Carrie think of him? How could he bear to meet her again, or how could he ever hope that she would love him? While he was asking himself these questions, looking up, he saw that Carrie stood be-

Camp Correspondence.

FORT WORTH, Jan. 12, 1862. MR. EDITOR:-It has been some time since I wrote you. The press of duty and want of news has kept us from so doing; nor have we any war news to tell you now, but thought we would give you some history of camp life as we have found it .-From the very commencement of our duties, the restraints of home and good moral society seem to have been thrown off, truce. and in the language of the Bible, in the case of Job, the devil came also; and, in fact, the Lord was not in all our ways .-The Sabbath was chosen as a day before he felt a gentle hand on his arm, and all others for extra drill, or some other worldly matter, until what few there were illustrating the fact. Saturday afternoon who desired to live in reference to the world to come had, with a few exceptions, come to think that to be a soldier was to loose all sense of civilization and manliness. It is true the Government is not in fault in this respect, but the fault is found in its appointtees, whose sordid desire for gain so outweighs their love of country that the latter is sunk into oblivion. It is true that we have our Chaplains, and it is also true that they are not exempt from when that cake fell on his gouty toe, I | the love of money. But there is one thing more startling true; we have one of those pests, called army sutlers, that there is being so much said about just now. I noticed in the Pioncer, of the 4th inst., an article in which you had the subject in a nut shell. There are some things that are very handy to have; but as a general rule there is more harm than good comes of army sutlers. The other, by the name of Baxley, was traveling on the usual pass. On the way to Old Point, she made inquiries of Capt. Millward whether she would be subjected to an examination at Old Point, and she was informed that Provost Marshal Davis, about whom she seemed anxious to know as much as possible in advance, would probably act according to circumstances. She appeared slightly uneasy On arriving here she was not submitted to a rigid examination, but allowed to proceed to Baltimore. Capt. Davis's suspicions had become aroused, however, and as the boat was about to leave he particularly charged his deputy, Sergeant Brigham, of Fortress Monroe, who constantly goes up an down the Bay, to keep a close watch on her. POLITICIANS VS. PATRIOTS.

In a short time we shall take occasion to express our views in reference to a certain class of politicians who feign to be "Patriots," but who are in reality enemies to their country's good. The Pioneer claims to be independent on all subjects, and while we duly respect the opinions of honest politicians of all parties, we claim the right and shall uso the means to show up a certain class of Politicians in their true light.

10th Regiment N. J. Volunteers. This Regiment, known as the "Olden Legion," formerly encamped at Beverly, N. J., has been for some time passed at Camp Clay, near Washington, D. C .-Our correspondent last week gave an interesting account of the Regiment, and a spicy article from there, appears in the Pioneer of this week.

On Tuesday last we had the pleasure of a visit from the Chaplain of this Regiment, Rev. J. B. Graw, from whom we learned the following facts, which will be of interest to our readers, as most of the men composing this Regiment are from South Jersey, many of them from this and Cape May County.

Major T. S. Allison paid them off or Saturday last. Some of the Sergeants received as high as $80 pay. The 1st 3d and 9th New Jersey Regiments were also paid off during last week. The men as a general thing in these Regiments, send nearly the entire of their pay home to their families and friends Mr. Graw brought on and distributed in this part of the County about $3000. About $9,-000 in all was brought by the Chaplain. The field officers of the Regiment are all to be removed, also some of the commissioned officers. Captain Neal of the regular army it is expected will be appointed Colonel. This is according to Gen. McClellan's wish. There is no contagious disease at present in camp. The Monday next.

We have received a copy of "The Broken Engagement; or Speaking the Truth for One Day," written by Mrs. E. D. E. N. SOUTHWORTH, author of the "Lost Heiress," "Deserted Wife," &c. Mrs. Southworth's fictions have gained an almost unprecedented popularity, by their intense and exciting interest, and the strength of limning displayed in her delineations of character. The "Broken Engagement" is a story of touching pathos and absorbing interest, carrying with it a moral worthy to be inculcated. The present tale is destined to be widely popular. Price 25 cts. Camp Correspondence. CAMP CLAY, Dear Washington, D. C., January 22, 1862.

Tenth Regiment N. J. Volunteers. MR. EDITOR: - Doubtless many of your readers would be pleased to read a few lines concerning the boys of the "bloody tenth," as it is called by some of the other regiments. . Our Camp is well named; for such clay no Jorseyman over saw in the pine lands of Cumberland or Cape May. The clay is mud. and the mud is clay, both of which abound to a superlative degree Indeed, one scarcely reaches bottom in itinerating on this "sacred soil." But despite mud and clay, the boys keep up good spirits, for they have heard that the "Paymaster is coming," and of all masters they ike him the best. Many families will be made glad in a very few days, by the sight of money which patriotic husbands and sons will send to wives and parents.

There has been much dissatisfaction among the men concerning some of the officers, but this trouble will soon be obviated by the removal of these gentlemen to what they call "civilized life." This regiment is under lasting obligations to our beloved townsman, Hon. Jno T. Nixon. who has taken and is still taking a deep interest in the welfare of officers and men Let it be known far and wide that he is the soldiers friend-let this fact be written in letters of living light, that those who run may read. It is said that we shall be removed to Fortress Monroe in a few days. If this be true, we shall "snuff the battle breeze" in less than thirty days. come it must, the shock will shake the keystone from rebellions arch, and cause the patriotic hearts of loyal men to leap with joy. True! the heavens may be il lumined by the lurid flames of war, but those flames shall kindle union fires in every rebel State. The days of the rebel lion are numbered. The die will soon be cast, for when the legions of liberty move forward, they shall advance to certain liberty.

"God help the rebels when the tempest swings UNION BLUE.

WARREN'S GEOGRAPHICAL SERIES!

WARREN'S PRIMARY GEOGRAPHY, WARREN'S

COMMON SCHOOL GEOGRAPHY, WARREN'S PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY.

These three books form a complete geographical coarse, adapted to all grades of schools. They have recently been thoroughly revised, and now contain all new political and territorial changes, with statistic; from the census of 1860. The Maps and Engravings are of the very highest order of excellence; and in all the books the maps are in the same volume with the descriptive text. The series is now used in most of the principal cities and towns of the United States, and has given great satisfaction wherever it has been adopted.
