For the West Jersey Pioneer. HARVEST.

BY MRS. SARAH S. SOCWELL.

How fair, o'er all the teeming land. The golden harvest lies ! How bright, above the peaceful scene, Bend the pure summer skies !

How soft and sweet the airs that blow Thro' these long sultry days; Hew cheerfully the insect throng Awake their harvest lays!

Fair morning wakes us with a kiss, Bidding us rise and gaze Upon the glories she prepares For the bright summer days.

When sunset turns along the West, How sweetly evening falls! With what a pleasant still, small voice, She to the labour calls!

And the calm, solemn summers night-How grandly doth it march, In its imperial majesty, Adown the starry arch! God of the Harvest! Thee we bless For all these lovely things; To Thee, a psalm of thankfulness, The whole bright earth now sings.

The Charms of Good Health.

Woman's incapacity is the only real barrier to woman's progress. Whenever woman show themselves able, men will show themselves willing. This is what you need-strength, calibre. You do not set half enough value on muscular power. Æsthetic young lady-writers and senti-mental penny-a-liners have imbibed and propagated the idea, that feebleness and fragility are womanly and fascinating.— The result is, a legion of languid headaches, an interesting inability to walk half a dozen consecutive miles, a delicate horror of open windows, northwest wind, and wholesome rain storms. There is no commuting the amount of charming invalidism following in the wake of such a line

The dogs are short lived. Many die from disease of the lungs, and others are lost in the falling of avalanches and other accidents. Neither men or dogs can long stand the severe climate and thin air of so great a height Both are often obliged to go down into the valleys below, and recruit amid milder scenes. Looking at Strangers in Church. Sitting in church one Sunday, a friend remarked to me as a stranger came in, on whom nearly all eyes were turned, "did you ever see how people look at strangers coming in church," saying yes, I whispered you "looked too." That's the way -we look and have onr stare out, not expecting any one else to do the same, and yet they do-and the result is when a stranger finds himself or herself the object of such scrutiny, they are placed in au awkward and embarrased position, unless they were of a strong nerve. Now persons should have respect for the feelings of others, and remember how they should feel were they in such a condition. One may say well, if it was I "they may stare," but recollect that it is easier said than done. Now in such a case, if your curiosity is so great, and you must have a look. why do it so you will not be noticed; for. it is a very unenviable situation to a person of sense, to be the object of vulgar and curious scrutiny. "The wild buffalo frequents the salt licks of Northwestern America: the wild animals in the central part of South Africa are a sure prey to the hunter who conceals himself behind a salt spring; and our domestic cattle run peacefully to the hand that offers them a taste of this delicious luxury. From time immemorial it has been known that without salt, man would miserably perish; and, among horrible punishments, entailing certain death, that of feeding culprits on saltless food is said to have prevailed in former times. Maggots and corruption are spoken of by ancient writers as the distressing symptoms which saltless ed him, woke him up, gave him something to drink, and carried him on his back to chemical modern could explain how sufferings arose. > markable circumstances attending the fortunes of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, was the tranquility in which their lives were passed, and the late period to which they were protracted. Most of them lived to a good old age, crowned with civil honors bestowed by the gratitude of the republic, and some of them perished by mere decay of the powers of nature. Of the fiftysix who affixed their signatures to that document, twenty-seven lived to an age exceeding seventy years, and forty to an age of sixty. Only two of the whole number, Gwinnett, of Georgia, who fell in a duel in his 45th year, and Lynch of South Carolina, who was shipwrecked in his 60th, died a violent death. Twenty one lived to the beginning of the present century, and three were permitted to see the great experiment of a representative confederacy confirmed by the events of fifty years. Of all the delegates from New York and New England only one, Whipple of New Hampshire, died at an earlier age than sixty. Never in the world had the leaders in any bold and grand political movement more reason to congratulate themselves and their country on the issue. The exertions and perils of their manhood were succeeded by a peaceful, honored and ripe old age, in which they witnessed the happy result of the institutions they had aided in devising, and they were gathered in their graves amid the regrets of the generation which was in its cradle when they laid the foundations of the republic.

Are our Seasons Drier than Formerly? Why? Judging of the Summers now, only from our recollection of what they used to be. and it seems as if they were becoming much drier than formerly. During a portion of each Summer, the ground becomes very dry, and the grass parched up. The crops suffer, and are not unfrequently shortened by it. This seems to be the case not rarely, as formerly, but, of late years, frequently. According to the hydrographical map of the State, four or five inches less water falls annually in the southern than the northern part of the State. Situated as we are with the ocean on one side, and the Delaware Bay below and on the other side of us, the casual observer would suppose that, as the ocean and other large bodies of water are the reservoirs from which our rains come, we should receive as much rain as any contiguous section. That this is not the fact, is owing, probably, more to the flat surface of the land than to any other cause. The higher the land the cooler. Hence, mountains even in the Torrid Zone are covered with perpetual snow .-The air surrounding it is, of necessity, also ment in Price's whole army. cold in proportion to its elevation. Vapor cannot rise from the sea until the rays of the sun have heated the water to some extent. After this vapor rises it moves along in currents until it comes in contact with a colder medium, when it be comes condensed into rain, or frozen into snow or vapor. The upper part of this State is mountainous, and as rain clouds seldom exceed a mile in height, they are carried by the southerly winds to the neighborhood of the mountains, where they come in contact with colder air, which condenses them into rain. An excellent illustration is given by the tea kettle when the water in it is boiling. THE ARMY MOVING ON.

The position of affairs in castern Va , for al nost the first time since the war began, gives free scope to the hopes of the loug-waiting loyl men who wish a speedy end of the war. Late as the season is it is not yet necessary to go into winter quarters, and we mistak the purpose of the army now if it will consen to go into winter quarters short of Richmond The new year is likely to see a triumphant, powerful, well-appointed army at that city thundering for its possession. All the forces available for its defence will no doubt be concentrated there at an early day; for by thi time Lee and Jeff. Davis believe the war wil ne prosecuted in carnest. Already Sigel's ad vance is at the Rappahannock river, and the advance of this division will soon ascertain whether a great battle is to be fought on the Gordonsville line or not. There are conflicing statements on this point-some asserting that the main army of the rebels has retired to Richmond; others, with equal confidence, placing the main repel force near Gordonsville It is not probable that any considerable orce remains in the Shenaudoah valley .-The fighting at the various passes has been only with small detachments of rebels, probaably only just enough being left to show resistance, concealing the retreat of the main body to the Staunton line of exit into the plain east of the Blue Ridge. They are not likely to permit their army to be divided, or to allowed us to reach Gordonsville before the main body of their force is either there to defend it, or well on their way to Richmond Very Gordonsville, and is reported to have been joined, by the force under Bragg. There has are, however, and we are deeply interested to know what their course will be now that the hall has opened in terrible earnest, and that they cannot promise themselves immunity anywhere, whether winter comes or not? The army is now inspired with an energy that will bring out the strength so long nur sed in camp and restrained in the field. The cavalry, that have been so much decried and so long unlucky, now prove themselves more than the equals of Stuart's, and the generals who lead them are winning laurels that cannot fade. Every division and every arm of the service is conscious that nothing less than the most active movements and the most 'determined courage will be tolerated; while it s also true that, with few exceptions, the officers and men are even more eager for effective service than the people for whom they

DR. BANNING, DEAR SIR.—I feel it to be due you as well as the community, to say, that although I have worn your Brace, for relief of piles, only a short time, I have already experienced more complete and speedy relief from the most painful suffering of twenty years than I had ever anticipated or hoped; and with great pleasure I would recommend your agreeable and effective Brace to those similarly afflicted.

Messas Epirous:-Some weeks since, I read your published abstract of Dr. Banning's lectures in your city, the auxiliary mechanical cause and cure of vocal, pulmonary, digestive and other weakness, and thinking with you, that although no doctor, the views seemed to be beautiful and rational.

I visited Dr. B. at the National Hotel and made the experiment of one of his Braces; and I desire through you to say to thousands of similar sufferers with the estimable lady whose letter on the same subject you published some time since, that " I have already experienced more substantial relief from aggravated and exhausting bleeding piles, and from great general debility, than I ever could have expected or even hoped." The relief has been perfect and without pain. My improvement in posture and inward strength, and my abiliy to preach, is very great.

You have my thanks for furnishing the public with so lucid an abstract of Dr. B's new and hopeful doctrine, that many of the most familiar and opprobrious chronic weaknesses of the day are more the result of a mechanical displacement than of a diseased condition of parts concerned. How to Make Good Butter-

It is rather a delicate matter to tell any of the matrons of the farm house that they don't make good butter; yet it is an unmistakeble fact, that more than half the butter that comes to market is of very poor quality. We know that there is a great difference in the milk of cows; but the rule should hold with them as with everything else-keep only the best. A cow that gives poor milk is not worth keeping, either to raise calves or for milk or butter, and should be made a beef of as soon as that fact is accertained. To make good sweet butter, milk should always be skimmed before t becomes sour. Particular attention to the milk pans is absolutely indispensable. It is a practice with some of our best butter makers to set the milk on the stove immediately after straining and let it get well heated throughin fact quite hot. This causes a thick cream to rise quickly before the milk sours, and if skimmed off promptly, will prevent that bitter unpleasant taste which some butter, especially winter butter so frequently has. Where the quantity of milk is sufficient it is customary o churn the new milk every day. This, it is said makes very superior butter. In the agricultural community there is no part of the housewife's duties more important than the fore the recent advance in price, and buying care of the dairy. Poor butter is worse than none on bread. Good cows, sweet cream, butter well worked, kept in a cool place and Philadelphia. brought freshly to market, will furnish an article always a ready sale at a good price. But to expect good butter from sour stale cream is worse than expecting "grapes from thorns or figs from thistles "

it. In Pennant's Zoology under the rti cle Seal, he says: "That when the animals are devouring a very oily ash, which they always do under water, the waves above are remarkable smooth; and it is by this the fishermen know where to find them. The fisherman at Gibraltar are accustomed to pour a little oil on the sea in order to still its motion, that they may be enabled to see the oysters lying at its bottom, which are there very large, and which they take up with a proper instrument. A similar practice is followed among fishermen in various other fi-hermen of Lisbon, when about to return into the river, if they see too great a surf upon the bar, empty a bottle or two of oil into the sea which suppresses the breakers, and allows them to pass freely.

CHARLES RUMSEY,

In Rumsey's Block. Standard Manure, in accordance with our arrangements.

As we find great mistrust prevails in the minds of the farming community of the Eastern States—indeed, an utter want of confidence—in special manures, permit us in this connection to suggest to you to extend, in your capacity as manufacturing chemists, such guarantees of purity, etc., as in your good judgment will enable us to satisfy the minds of intelligent agriculturists.

To the large plauting sections, where Rhedes' Manure has been used for many years, there is no occasion for such assurance; but from all we gather during extended visits among Eastern farmers, find they have ample ground for fears—owing, doubtless, to ignorance and want of manufacturing skill on the part of those who have been furnishing these sections.
