SHERIDAN'S RIDE

BY T, BUCHANAN BEAD. Up from the South at break of day, Bringing to Winchester fresh dismay, The affrighted air with a shudder bore, Like a herald in haste to the chieftain's door, The terrible grumble and rumble and roar, Telling the battle was on once more, And Sheridan twenty miles away. And wider still those billows of war, Thundered along the horison's bar, And louder yet into Winchester rolled The roar of that red sea uncontrolled, Making the blood of the listener cold As he thought of the stake in that fiery fray, And Sheridan twenty miles away. But there is a road from Winchester town, A good broad highway leading down, And there, through the flush of the morning light A steed as black as the steeds of night. Wasseen to pass as with eagle flight-As if he knew the terrible need

He stretched away with his utmost speed,

Hill rose and fell-but his heart was gay,

With Sheridan fifteen miles away. Still sprung from those swift hoofs, thunder The dust, like the smoke from the cannon's mouth, Or the tail of a comet sweeping faster and faster, Foreboding to traitors the doom of disaster, The heart of the steed and the heart of the maste Were beating like prisoners assaulting their walls Impatient to be where the battle field calls, Every nerve of the charger was strained to full play

With Sheridan only ten miles away. Under his spurning feet, the road Like an arrowy Alpine river flowed, And the landscape sped away behind Like an ocean flying before the wind. And the steed, like a bark fed with furnace ire, Swept on, with his wild eyes full of fire, But lo! he is nearing his heart's desire— He is snuffing the smoke of the roaring fray, With Sheridan only five miles away. The first that the General saw were the groups Of stragglers, and then the retreating troops; What was done-what to do-a glance told him be Then striking his spurs with a terrible oath. He dashed down the line 'mid a storm of huzzas,

And the wave of retreat checked its course ther The sight of the master compelled it to pause, With foamfand with dust the black charger w

By the flash of his eye, and his red nostrils play, He seemed to the whole great army to say, "I have brought you Sheridan all the way From Winchester down to save the day!" Hurrah, hurrah for Sheridan Hurrah, hurrah, for horse and man, And when the statues are placed on high Under the dome of the Union sky, The American soldiers' Temple of Fame There with the glorious General's name "Here is the steed that saved the day By carrying Sheridan into the fight.

Give me the old songs—those exquisite bursts of melody which thrilled the lyres of insipid poets and minstrels of long ugo. Every note has born on the air a tale of joy and rapture—of sorrow and sadness. They tell of days gone by, and time hath it off again, by their great valves and ingiven them a voice which speaks to us of terior machinery at command. those who once breathed those melodiesof what they are now, and what we soon shall be. My heart loves those melodies; may they be mine to hear till life shall end, and as I "launch my boat" upon the river, stood the old palace, two miles in sea of eternity, may their echoes be wafted to my ear, to cheer me on my passage from the scenes of earth and earth land!

Give me the old paths, where we have wandered and culled the flowers of love and friendship in the days of "Auld Lang Syne;" sweeter, far the dells whose schoes have answered to our voices; whose turf is not a stranger to our footsteps, and whose rills have, in childhood's days, our merry playfellows from whom we have city a golden—a splendid appearance. parted, and meet no more in the old nooks we loved so well. May the old paths watered with heaven's own dew, and be be green forever in my memory! Give me the old house, upon whose stairs we seem to hear little footsteps, and under whose porch a merry laugh seems to mingle with the winds and whistle through old trees, beneath whose branches lie the graves of those who once trod the halls, and made the chambers ring with glee. And O! above all give me the old friends my funeral dirge be chanted by the

Life is beautifully compared to a fountain fed by a thousand streams, that perish if one be dried. It is a silver chord, twisted with a thousand strings that part asunder if one be broken. Frail and thoughtless mortals are surrounded by innumerable dangers, which make it much more strange that they escape so long, than that they almost all perish suddenly at last. We are encompassed with accidents every day to crush the mouldering tenements we inhabit. The seeds of disease are planted in our constitution by nature. The earth and atmosphere whence we draw the breath of life are impregnated with death; health is made to operate its own destruction; the food that nourishes containing the elements of decay; the soul that animates it, by vivifying first, tends to wear it out by its own action; death works in ambush along the paths. Notwithstanding this is the truth so palpably confirmed by the daily example before our eyes, how little do we lay it at heart! We see our friends and neighbors

From the Carleton Place Herald. BABYLON.

After the destruction of Nineveh' "to please the Medes," 612 years before Christ, almost 25 centuries ago, Nebu-chadnezzar rebuilt, amplified, glorified and magnified this his native city; without a rival-without an equal-the political centre of his magnific tyranny as King of Kings throughout the world. It was a magazine and a museum of national wonder; a vast quadrangle, every side 15 miles, walls 350 feet high and about 90 wide-as wide as Broadway, New York, or almost as Market street, Philadelphia. Now it was a place to defy a siege from all foes, especially "the Kings of the East,"—Darius the Mede, and Cyrus the Persian-who ultimately took it by stratagem. In its plan, the Euphrates was brought artificially to run through it from north to south, in its very centre, with extensive and sumptuous masonry and watergates on either side for the whole extent, as well as massive works 21 miles above and as much below the city, making these vast fabrics in all 20 miles.-Besides this, he made, some twenty or more miles above the city, an ingenious hydraulic apparatus—a noble contrivance for reducing its flow, since the melting snow on the mountains of Armenia, in carly June, was, and yet is wont to flood the rivers, sometimes making a deluge in their tread through what was after called the lower Mesopotamia. To prevent such a peril to the city, he thus diverted its waters into an immense artificial lake, whose expanse in superficial feet could contain seven such cities as Babylon; being also a perfect square, 40 miles each side, and 75 feet deep-not from the grounds surrounding, but from the top of its own banks, which were immensely broad and high, owing to the great amount for the purposes of extensive irrigation to the gardens, fields, and villas of the vicinal nobles and satraps of the realm. Look, then, at ancient Babylon! How calm and careless within-its monarch nd its citizens? They could defy a siege, walls—the soil being, to a proverb, the owing to the industrious misrepresentaas they did. The vacant acres within the richest and most fertile in the worldcould produce enough of food, and of every variety, for the subsistence of its inhabitants—for ever and aye, so to speak. The great depression. It was, in fact, reduced their confidence. Beside the most that year. In the eastern part of the city was the temple of Belus, from the centre of which rose that collossal creation, the Tower of Babel; Near it, on the same side of the circut. Opposite these, on the other side of the river, was diplayed the new palace in all its haughty splendor, within the compass of which rose the Hanging Gardens, with all their foliage, fruits, and flowers, supported on arches to the amazing height of the other edifices and the city walls. The hundred brazen gates of fine polish, and the thousand domes covered with burnished metal, would reflect reflected back our forms, and those of the sunbeams, and give to this magnificent and explanation of the German emigration to the United States: In no country in the world, Britain alone excepted, the gigantic struggle in the United States of America has been followed with such intense interest as in Germany. The explanation of this fact neither vexed nor ashamed to depend on is obvious. Germany, more than any other country in the world (except the United Kingdom) has helped to make the Next to the British Isles, Germany has who bear occasionally from each other of exchange between the confederate governsent the largest contingent of settlers to sallies of ill humor with patient mildness. Every other man has a brother or sister, an uncle or aunt, and cousins and other relatives of all degrees without number on the western side of the North Atlantic. From the confines of Russia and Poland—from the frontiers of Hungary and even Turkey-from the coasts of the Baltic, the Adriatic, and the North Sea-from the smallest and most remote hamlet of the interior—from the plains and valleys, as well as from the capitals and manufacturing disricts, Germans of every rank, calling, and acquirement, have deserted the fatherland that treated them so unparently, though they loved it with such filial piety, and poured forth for the best part of a century in an unbroken and overwidening stream to join their friends and relatives on the shores of the great Western Republic. The yearly increasing fleets of emigrant ships leaving the ports of Hamburg, Bremem and Rotterdam, and all bound, with the exception of a small minority, for New York, Boston or Baltimore. Fifteen years ago the tide of emigration had begun to turn strongly in favor of Brazil: but the nation had no sooner learned, through Herr Sturz, the Prussian Consul-General at Rio, that all Germans who set foot on Brazilian soil were destined to a lot inferior to that of a coolie, than the emigrations of the friends of the South in the Free States and in Europe, the emigration in the first year of the rebellion suffered to one-fourth of that of the preceding strife began to be seen in their true light, emigration began to recover, and the AMERICAN SLAVERY.

Who could forsee, at the commencement of our intestine strife, the downfall of slavery in the country. As a domestic institution of the Southern States, it had the guarantee of constitutional protection, and Congressional legislation. The South was made secure in the possession of its colored population. The general Government stood pledged to protect the master in the event of the escape of his slave. In no instance was it faithless to its pledge.

As the war progressed, the protection of slavery was seen to be in positive antagonism to the life of the Republic .-One or the other must die. We distinctly recall the strong aversion on the part of the masses in the North to touch this vexed question. Probably no one man in all the Free States was more opposed to its agitation than President Lincoln .-Reset as he was by constant outside pressure, to interpose the strong arm of governmental power, he stood firm to his high official oath, which included all the rights of all the States. Nor did his subsequent action infringe in the slightest degree the sanctity of that oath. His Emancipation Proclamation was as much a necessity, as his ordering the military and naval forces of the United States to interpose for the life of the nation.

The progress of the war has justified the wisdom of that measure, and the overwhelming verdict of the people has ratified it. The days of American slavery are numbered. Maryland has inaugurated a condition of freedom instead of slavery. Many of the most extreme proslavery men are now hiring their recent slaves at remunerative wages, and will soon realize the pecuniary benefit from the change in labor. The colored man working for himself and family is a difmaster might be. We verily believe that within five years there will be found in the State of Maryland some of the strongest anti-slavery men, who now are violent in denouncing the immediate and uaconditional abolition of slavery, whereby 87,000 slaves have become free men.

It is a fact worthy of notice, and to the freedmen of South Carolina, and in the other military departments of the South. It is a sufficient refutation of the charge that emancipated slaves would necessarily become burdens on the charithe tax-paying citizen. The slave is proving that he is capable of appreciating the blessings of freedom as well as the advantages of education. In Beaufort District, South Carolina, over 1100 children have been gathered into schools. The recent report of the teachers, who had many years experience in teaching in New Eng. land schools, is, that the progress made by those colored children in elementary education is quite on a par with any white children who have come under their notice. The organization of the Freedmen's Bureau is an indication on the part of the Government not only that slavery people.

MARL IN SOUTH JIR EY.

The fertility of portio is of this county raised from it Some of our most reliable furmers say, the beneficial effects of good murl can be seen for a score of years if apiting them. There are several but a few miles west of Bridgeton, which are pro ducing annually immense quantities of this valuable fertilizer. The cost of carting any considerable distance when the expense of keeping teams for that purpose is so great, does not pay, and con sequently the farmers living in the eastern and northern townships of this county have been deprived heretofore of using much marl. The West Jersey Marl and Transportation Co., just getting fairly in operation, is now prepared to deliver marl on the West Jersey Railroad at very reasonable prices. The projectors of this company will do more for the improvement and development of the soil for miles along the Railroad, than anything during the last century. Those who have lived in this part of the State for many years past, remember when it was customary to clear a tract of wood land, cart the wood to "Bridgetown" or the "Bridge," as it was then commonly termed, trade it for flour and grain, which was imported from Philadelphia, and a few groceries, among which was always a supply of something to keep the "spirits" up. Cash in those days was almost as scarce as greenbacks After clearing a few acres the soil was skimmed over until its fertility was ex hausted, and then turned out to commons; the occupant either engaged in chopping and carting wood, or pulling up stakes and emigrating to the "far west" - which western Pennsylvania and eastern Ol io was then considered. The fertilizers pro duced in those t'm s from the use of a few lads of salt hay carted from the "mash" in the winter, was not sufficient to keep up the productiveness of the soil. Since those days a new era has dawned on South Jersey. A thrifty farmer who now raises ferent being from the slave who toils for more wheat, corn and other crops on tweehis master, we care not how humane that ty acres, than was raised forty years agri on any five hundred acres in his neighborhood, told us that he could then purchase all the cleared land he wanted at twenty-five cents an acre, adjoining the place where he now lives Many of there o'd commons or fields have been brought under cultivation, and there are now thou

The question of subsistence is of course of the first importance to Gen. Sherman in his daring march. Upon this point the Cincinnati Times says :

Sherman has been chiefly occupying his time in laying in a full supply of hard bread and boef cattle; and he has with him of the former sixty days full rations, and several thousand head of cattle. For all things else he will depend on the country over which he is to pass. His animals can subsist well. Corn and sweet potatoes are abundant. The expedition commenced its march upon the evening of the 12th inst., with a division of Kilpatrick's cavalry, under Gen. McCook, and the Twentieth Corps, General Slocum, in advance. This advance was to proceed slowly in the direction of Macon, and to be followed by the Fourteenth Corps, Gen. Jeff. C. Davis. The army of the Tennessee, Gen. Howard. composed of the Fiftcenth Corps, Gen. Logan, Sixteenth, Gen. Smith, and Seventeenth, Gen. Frank Blair, left Kingston three days before for Atlanta, tearing up the railroad as it went along. On the 11th the Etowah Bridge was destroyed, and from thence to the Chattahoochce river the work of destruction was complete. Almost the entire railroad track was removed, and the rails twisted up and otherwise injured; all the important storehouses and depots were burned, and the culverts and masoury blown up. The immense structure which spans the Chattahoochee was burned and the foundations blown up. Everything was in readiness at Atlanta to make good the destruction of that town upon the arrival of the Army of the Tennessee, and, in all probability he Gate City, so long the fountain-head of the South for the production of muni tions of war, was sent reeling to ruin on tories and storehouses, and everything liable to be transferred to rebel use, which would not burn, was to be blown up, inrailway accompaniment in the centre of the city. Gen. Grant's Visit to the North. Gep. Grant visited Burlington, in this State the residence of his family, on Friday of last week. On the afternoon of that day, the people of that quiet town were surprised by see ing the Lieutenant General quietly walking along a principal street, in plain citizen's dress, in company with his little bright-eyed daugh ter Nellie, and other members of his family Many hand-shakings and cordial congratula tions took place; but as the news of his arri val spread, the demonstrations became more exuberant, and drove the General to the seclu sion of his home. Here, until a late hour on Friday night, he received a number of visitors, the last of them not leaving his residence until near midnight. Thursday morning, returning to the front, Gen. Grant missed the Washington train at Philadelphia, and to pass away the time, walked about the city in civilian's dress-passing, exclaimed, "My God, there's General Grant This news spread almost with the speed of lightning, and in a few minutes the General was completely besieged. The crowd increased ment came rushing to the spot to inquire into the cause of the rejoicing. He was grasped around the neck; by his coat tail, and his hands and arms were seized by all who could possibly reach him. The scene was becoming more exciting, and the General stood confounded, not knowing what to do to extricate himself. At this moment the police came to his rescue, forced back the crowd and took him to the Contral Telegraph Office adjoining, the doors of which were at once shut and guarded. The crowd gathered around and climbed up in the windows, and cheer after cheer was given for the hero. After some delay, the General was conducted up-stairs into the Mayor's private office, where he was taken in charge by to leave as soon as possible. The Mayor immediately sent for a chaise. Sleep, sleep, noble warrior, sleep,

The tomb is now thy bed.
Cold on its bosom thou dost rest
In silence with the dead.
But nobly he fought on the grim battle field.
His home and his country determined to sailed,
Till death laid his hard on his one noble head,
And he once a soldier now sleeps with the dead. On the 14th inst., EMILY MARIA, daughter of Trunan and Satah C. Chapman, in the 2 year of her age

Henderson's Capitol Clothing Store. 510 MARKET STREET First Clothing Store above Fifth. By our National Poet, Dr. George Allen Spangler

THE SPIRIT MAKES THE MAN. A youth, devoid of spirit bold, None of life's beauties to unfold, Is like a being chained to earth— To friends or self of little worth. Not only to himself a blank, Left with the idle for to rank, The bane to every one he knew, The boy with downcast look and hue. 'Tis mostly caused in boyhood's hour, Which, in the bud, makes spirit cower, Attempts to sway by domineering—
A vain attempt at children's rearing.

So, if you would advance your sons, Go rig them out at HENDERSON'S, Their downcast spirits he'll uplift. In Market street, first door from Fifth. CANDY MANUFACTORY, Jones' policy which has proved of such great satisfaction both to his friends and the public, has demonstrated the fact, that ONE PRICE is the proper basis on which to do business. Many persons who are not able to judge of the value of any article, are glad to avail themselves of the opportunity of purchasing where they can secure what they want at the same price as their neighbors. Others, not liking to ask the dealers to take less, are often obliged to pay too much for an article. To meet this want Jones' one price Store has been established, and having worked well for fifteen years, has gained many friends. Strangers visiting Philadelphia would do well to call, as they will find one of the best stocks of ready-made Clothing in the city; while those wishing their garments made to order can secure them at the Sinriest notice.

HAWLEY'S SOLIDIFIED

For Cleansing, Whitening and Preserving the Teeth
This article is prepared with the greatest care upon scientific principles, and warranted not to contain anything in the slightest degree deleterious to the teeth or gums. Some of our most emiment dental surgons have given their sanction to, and cheerfully recommend it as a preparation of superior qualities for Cleansing, Whitening and Preserving the teeth; it cleans thom readily, rendering them beautifully white and pearly, without the slightest injury to the enamel. It is healing to the gums where they are ulcerated and sore. It is also an excellent disinfector for old decayed teeth, which are often very offensive. It gives a rich and creamy taste to the mouth. cleansing it thoroughly, and imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath.

TESTIMONIALS.

The following opinion of Dr. White, as to the high esteem in which he holds the Dental Cream, must be sufficient evidence of its value; to quote other testimonials in detail is needless, concentring ourselves by simply giving the names and addresses of persons who speak of its excellency for the teeth.

Having carefully examined A. Hawley's "Solidified Dental Cream," I hereby cheerfully recommend it to the public generally. It is an excellent preparation for cleansing and preserving the teeth, and can be used by all persons with the utmost confidence, as its properties are perfectly harmless. Besides preserving the teeth, it promotes a healthy action to the gums and imparts a pleasantness to the breath.

IMPORTANT . TO ALL ALIDS

IRON IN THE BLOOD. It is well known to the medical profession, that Iron is the vital principal or life element of the blood. This is derived chiefly from the food we eat; but if the food is not properly digested, or if, from any cause whatever, the necessary quantity of iron is not taken into the circulation, or becomes reduced, the whole system suffers. The bad blood will irritate the heart, will clog up the lungs, will stupefy the brain, will obstruct the liver, and will send its disease producing elements to all parts of the system, and every one will suffer in what-ever organ may be predisposed to disease.

The great value of Iron as a Medicine Is well known and acknowledged by all med ical men. The difficulty has been to obtasuch a preparation of it as will enter the circulation, and assimilate at once with the blood. This point, says Dr. Hayes, Massachusetts State Chemist, has been attained in the Peruvian Syrup, by combination in a way before
