TO MR. AND MRS. H. N., the occasion of their Silver Wed-ding, July 8, 1865. BY THEIR PASTOR. Twenty-five years, wife, have floated away, Since the fair, fresh morn of your bridal day— When you stood in the flush of your beautiful youth And pledged me your honor, your love and you

And sweet are the memories surging up now, As I think, wife, how nobly you've kept the wife's vov When my river of life has been turbid and dark, Your gentle affection has guided my bark; Through the reefs of temptation, alluring and fair, You have helped me to steer, by affection and prayer. You have helped me to head toward the beautiful You have helped me to need toward the beautiful shore,
Where temptation and sorrow forever are o'er;
And I look up to God with deep gratitude, wife,
For the twenty-five years of our wedded life.
Dear children have come to us, lovely and bright,
As time has pressed onward, these years of his flight
And you're watched them with me in their sickness and pain.

And rejoiced when our Father restored them again.
You have blessed God with me as they've honored our name—
And none of them, wife, has e'er brought us to shame
And I feel that my joy in our children is due
To the care, dearest wife, that's been given by you. To the care, dearest wife, that's been given by you.

You are dearer now, wife, than you were in the hour
When, twenty-five years since, I bowed to the power
Of the goodness and love that your beauty then graced,
And my heart in their keeping I joyonsly placed.
You are dearer each day, age, and fairer to me,
That we sail on tegether across our life's sea:
And in all the beyond, on both sides of life's river,
For these twenty-five years, I will bless God the Giver.

At the breaking out of the rebellion, our that extent they have since. The national treasury was in a depleted condition, and so sudden was the condition of hostilities thrust upon the North, that the stunning effects created more nervous excitability than the fearful, and their fears, (among the masses), for the time, amounted almost to a panic .were unwilling to invest in any kind of busioverwhelm them-and, while they were truly patriotic and loyal, they were even, for awhile, at a loss to give that assistance to the executive arm of the government which the crisis demanded. But, when the excitement cleared the rebellion had to be met, and that, too, with vigor and garnestness, both in soldiers and lay upon the altar of the country all the aid and others offering to loan the United States | Fashions, Receipts, &c. immense sums, even on collateral security.--By these means the requirements of the treasury were met until the far-reaching sagacity plans of national loans and banking system .-These gave such universal satisfaction to men of business, as well as those who had funds to loan, that so soon as the several loans were put into the market, they were at once absorbed. People of all classes readily subscribed for them, in sums ranging from fifty dollars up to thousands, which converted, de facto, our national debt into one owned by the themselves, subject to their guidance and control. Hence it is that, notwithstanding the predictions of politicians, there is no apprehension that any such thing as repudiation will ever take place in reference to it. The people, voice can make and unmake administrations, will not suffer their own interests to be destroyed, by the election to positions of power. of men who would repudiate this indebtedness for partisan purposes. But when the demands of the government were greatest; when the drain upon the national treasury was heaviest, and the patriotic services of our soldiers needed to be paid, then it was that Secretary Chase adopted another grand system to keep the treasury replenished, by selecting Jay Cooke, nesday evenings of next week. Esq., sole agent to dispose of the government bonds. No better choice could have been posing of these loans were perfected, and miland this one is fast absorbing all the others .-It has been, truly, the most popular of the several loans issued. Mr. Cooke is now engaged in selling them at an average rate of $5,000,000 per day. These subscriptions, who has taken his life in his hand and gone forth to battle for our country's honor, indicate how deeply determined the people are to support the national integrity, and render that material aid necessary to carry the government through all its financial embarrassments. And now, as the war has closed, and the work of reconstruction is commenced, it cannot be otherwise than a natural result, that a year or two will elapse before commercial and business affairs will settle down into regular channels, and flow on again smoothly. These results have been provided for in these loans; for the government has become the debtor to the people, by borrowing their money at 7 3-10th per cent. interest, and the people are willing "national debt," and makes the people secure in their investments. Besides, the bonds themselves are the best in the market, for they the country, is pledged for the honest and faithful payment of them. Our national debt. therefore, in this respect, may not be, exactly, a national blessing, but it is a better source of able bonds.

TO SABBATH SCHOOLS.

The Blanks to be filled out with the statistics of each Sabbath School in Cumberland County are now being sent by the County Secretary to each Township Secretary for distribution to the different schools. It is desirable that they be filled out soon and returned to the seldom afforded. On this occasion about two Township Secretaries; And as there is some expense connected with the Association, es. pecially the State Association, in printing Reports, &c., a collection is asked of each school in the County each year for defraying those expenses, as each school is benefited. No officer of the Association receives any pay, but this money goes to defray actual expenses .-Amount of collection to be forwarded to town-J. C. BOWEN. County Secretary.

The Condition of Jeff Davis. A correspondent of the New York Herald writes from Fortress Monroe that the health of Jeff Davis is failing; that one of his eyes is almost totally blind and the other much impaired, and that he has within a few days become unusually dejected. It is surmised that this depression of spirits has been caused by some one having communicated to him intelligence of the execution of the assassination conspirators As to the daily routine of his prison life, the writer says:

Life in prison is necessarily monotonous. To few it has ever been more so than to Davis. He rises pretty early, usually at five o'clock in the morning. He takes a bath the first thing, using salt water at first, and winding up with fresh water. His bathing facilities are limited, consisting of a common washtub half water, coarse towels and soap. An army blanket he converts into a temporary screen and bathes behind this. He is not very particular about his toilet, the fashion of combing his hair and all that, but is exact upon the subject of cleanliness of his underclothing, sheets, towels, &c. Bath and toilet completed, he reads his Bible, and at half past eight has his breakfast. This is served him from Dr. Craven's table. The statement in some of the papers that a daughter of Dr. Craven brings him his food is incorrect. A soldier brings his fast. His appetite is very variable. General Miles may call in to see him and pass a few words, or the officers of the guard may have something to say; for only these two except his physician and Craven, and the chaplain, of course, are allowed to speak to him. In con versation he has betrayed an anxiety and even determine I to discuss the subject of the impossibility of ever convicting him of treason. He hrows himself back upon the question of State rights as his main point of defence. For some time, finding that all the discussion was on his own side, he has kept silent on the subject .laily by any means, he passes most of his time till half past three P. M., his dinner hour, in looking at the window. He smokes his pipe occasionally, but is no great smoker. He says that much smoking makes him nervous. Af ter dinner he passes the time as before. He has supper at half-past eight o'clock, and then directly goes to bed. He sleeps pretty soundly, but more so formerly than latterly. At Union Volunteer Refreshment Saloon. One of the most interesting places that can be visited in Philadelphia is the above named net in convention, in the African Church on place. A few weeks more and it will cease to have those attractions, which for the past four years have characterised it. Within that time, ten thousand sick and wounded men have received medical aid in the hospital there established. Twenty thousand have had their wounds dressed, and forty thousand soldiers have obtained a nights lodging there. The Union Saloon has provided fifteen thousand cooked rations a day. Upwards of seven hundred and fifty thousand meals have been furnished the soldiers at this saloon alone.

There is also the Cooper Shop Saloon, ad-ining it, which has in a smaller way accomplished wonders in the same direction. On Monday evening last we had the pleasure of visiting these saloons where the wants of many soldiers have been provided for. Fortunately, while there, several regiments arrived, among which was the New Jersey Ninth, Col. James Stewart, Jr. The officers were noble looking young men, all but two of whom had enlisted as privates. Among the captains. we recognized Lucius C. Bonham, son of Hesekiah Bonham, residing near Bridgeton. He has been nearly four years in the service, and informs us that but a very few of those who went out with him were left in Company I, which went from Salem. The men looked war-Princeton; Gideon Lewis, Bordentown, and worn and glad to get back to their homes once mere. Several in the ranks were from Bridgeton, and inquired anxiously about their friends here. They were on their way to Trenton where they will be mustered out in a few days. Next week we will give a full report of the grandeur and magnificence of this saloon which has done so much for the soldiers. The officers ore very attentive and polite to us, especially Mr. B. S. Brown, who is the leading spirit in this glorious movement. Prof. Bruce, well known to many of our readers, was present and prevailed upon by the committee of ladies and gentlemen to sing some patriotic songs, while the soldiers were eating their evening meal .-After quietly placing a five dollar bill into the ands of the treasurer, he favored the immense throng with some of his best. The scene at the saloon, while the returned veterans were aelping themselves to a most sumptuous repast, was truly grand. Time forbids further notice this weeks.

FERTILIZERS .- We feel that it is hardly necessary to invite the attention of the agricultuists of Salem County, to the excellence and superiority of the Fertilizers manufactured by Allen & Needles. They have been tested fully for a number of years, and continue to men to dwell on the face of the earth, and maintain their popularity in the face of other hath determined the times before appointed, excellent compounds. These gentlemen give a careful personal supervision of the manufacture of their Fertilizers, and thus secure their purity. Their Super-Phosphate of Lime has been well tried with an unvarying success its constituent elements seem exactly adapted to the soil and to most of our crops. The price is fifty dollars per ton of 2000 lbs; it is carefully put up in new bags. Scarcely in-ferior to the phosphate in quality, but only about two-thirds its cost is their fertilizer, composed of animal matter finely ground bones, acids, &c., which enter into the compostion, and form the food of all plants. there are any farmers who have not tried these fertilizers, we advise them to lose no time in giving them a fair trial.—The above merited notice from the Salem Standard is applicable to Cumberland County. We endorse every word of it.

> TROUBLES INTENNESSEE. Notwithstanding a loyal administration has been established in Tennessee, the State is by no delivered from the vex other Southern States. Since the cessation of hostilities, many of the notorious and leading rebels are returning, and with characteristic insolence, are demanding all their for mer rights; and so warmly are they received by a certain class of so called Union men, that, were it not for the military, they would be restored to their property and given all the assistance and consideration necessary to place them in the same positions, social and political, which they occupied before the war.

Squall! bawl! squall!
Hawl! squall! bawl!
The baby cries,
And his little eyes Are filled with tears—
And he fills our ears
With the most unearthly kind of noise.
Worse than thunder— And so we wonder "What is the use of baby boys?" What shall we do? What course pursue
To make the little sinner cease,
And let us enjoy some rest and peace?

And let us enjoy some rest and peace?
Aha! Oho! We'll have repose.
For we've found the cause of all our woe,
The baby don't like his father's clothes;
They're poor and cheap,
And it makes him weep:
And he never will quit
From his crying a bit.
Till his father gots a decent suit So the father will go
(And he won't be slow)
To the great Oak Hall
And get some clothes
That are better than those
Which the troublesome youngster don't like at all,
And which made him so fearfully scream and bawl.
