THE MERCHANT'S STORY.

As my story is to be a very short one, I will commence at once, without any unnecessary introduction—plunge in medias res, which I suppose is Latin for "your running from the jump," and first forcibly uttered by some sharp fellow who despised the Greek chorus and Italian relative. I have commenced twice—once when I went into business on my own account, and the second time when I got married. I don't count my entrance into the world, disliking introduction, as I said before.

A DEAD SHOT.

Kit Carson tells a first rate story about a set-to he had with a Crow Indian that will bear repeating. Carson had been out towards Santa Fe, as a guide to a party of volunteers, and being well paid for his services, he laid in with another wild do.

AN AMERICAN FAST WOMAN IN PARIS.

A New York correspondent of the Rochester Union, says: "A curious incident to the career of a very fast and not very prudent fine lady in Paris, was mentioned the other day by a lady recently from that metropolis of world's eye."
