ELECTION DAY IN BRIDGETON.

Last Tuesday, the day when all over the Union the people assembled to give expression to their preferences for the line of policy to be pursued for the next four years, as well as for the different candidates who should represent their ideas, was one of the most beautiful that has graced the season, and seemed to smile so sweetly upon nature as to impress its sunny feeling upon all the crowds of men who arrayed themselves politically in battle array against each other.

There has probably been no election held in our city, no matter how unimportant the issue, where there was so generally quiet and good order. This was no doubt owing mostly to the State liquor law, introduced by Mr. Cobb, which forbids the sale of intoxicating drinks in small quantities on election days.

There was some betting going on, generally on the amount of majority that Grant would get, and of course somebody lost. We have no sympathy with that kind of argumentation and of course do not feel specially sorrowful over anybody who may have lost their money.

THE ELECTIONS.

Perhaps, in the whole past history of our country, there has not been a political contest conducted with as much respectability and fairness to achieve success, as has the one through which the country has just passed.

It was clearly settled that whichever party would largely influence the status of the Southern States, and define their position for the future of their existence. Like the streams that make up our rivers, whatever course they take, from accidental circumstances, in the beginning, they will almost uniformly keep through the long years to come, so the direction given to the policy of the States, lately in rebellion, at this time, whether straight or crooked, would be likely to continue through the period of national existence.

Mr. W. Staulup, of our city has purchased the express business of Mr. Mead. This business is one which cannot fail to be very remunerative, and at the same time a great accommodation to the community, when properly conducted.

The Female Benevolent Society of Bridgeton, organized Oct. 22d, 1828, and now just forty years old, held its annual meeting, on Wednesday, Oct. 21st, in the Lecture Room of the First Presbyterian Church.
